

Ron Dekker
Vice President, New Enterprise Business
Cisco Canada

As Vice President, New Enterprise Business at Cisco Canada, Ron Dekker is responsible for leading his team's sales and support activities, maintaining superior customer satisfaction levels, and growing Cisco's enterprise business within its largest accounts. He and his team work to ensure customer access to Cisco's most strategic and expert resources.

An industry veteran with extensive global experience in telecommunications, Dekker has held a wide range of management and strategic planning roles. Most recently, he served as President and CEO of Connex SEE Service, Inc., a national integrator of wired and wireless communications networks. Previously, he was Vice President of Alliances and Business Development for Tandberg Inc., where he identified and engaged new market opportunities and partnerships. Prior to that, Dekker founded and served as CEO and director of OneConnect, Canada's first IP managed services provider. Preceding OneConnect, he was President and CEO of Ericsson Canada Wireless Internet and before that was president of Williams Communications Canada, a company that was eventually purchased by TELUS.

Dekker serves as a member of the Young Presidents' Organization and is also a charter member of the Academy of Technology CEOs (AceTech). He is a director at Esna Technologies and has for the past six years served on the board of directors for the Children's Aid Foundation. More recently, Dekker has taken on the role of co-chair for Community Living Toronto's signature Community Rocks event, a major fundraising concert.
