

Kim Phan

“Party Central” Field Sales Relationship Manager

Described As:

Fun. Outgoing. Puts a smile on everyone’s face.

Surprising Fact His Co-Workers Don’t Know:

He used to play competitive badminton, and his team reached the regional quarterfinals of the London youth championships. Otherwise, his co-workers know a little too much about him!

Favorite Activity:

Getting everyone to have fun and making sure they have a family-like environment at work, by organising office parties and get-togethers outside the office. His reason: everyone spends so much of their lives at work, and it shouldn’t be a place that you dread going to.

Second Favourite Activity:

He loves Arsenal Football Club in the Premier League. His co-workers in Lisbon support Benfica, and the club colours are similar, but he would rather have a steak than a burger.

Mentors:

His parents, who emigrated to England from Vietnam and endured racism in a marginal London neighbourhood. They taught him that if he took advantage of every opportunity, he would succeed, and they were right.

Last Great Movie He Saw:

“Gran Torino,” the Clint Eastwood movie about a man who dislikes his neighbors because of their origins, but then finds he has more in common with them than his own family.

Philosophy:

Work hard and play hard.

Looks Forward To:

Moving to Asia (preferably Vietnam) with Cisco, to get closer to his roots. Also, to travel to Norway and see the Northern Lights, since he enjoys the cold and snow.
