

Kendji Meguro

Director, Financial Services Practice,
Internet Business Solutions Group

Kendji Meguro is director of the Cisco Internet Business Solutions Group (IBSG) Financial Services Practice. He combines his consulting expertise with strategic planning leadership positions in financial services and service provider organizations, advising CXOs of leading financial services institutions on how they can transform their organizations using innovative technology and processes.

Prior to joining Cisco IBSG, Meguro worked for Nextel as director of strategic planning, where he led Nextel's merger and acquisition initiatives in the telecommunications industry in Mexico.

Before that, he was head of strategic planning, product development, and marketing at Seguros Monterrey New York Life, where he also launched a cross-functional product development team and drove the firm's acquisition strategy for asset management and pension fund companies.

Meguro also worked in strategy consulting for Booz Allen Hamilton, Inc., advising banking, insurance, and consumer product companies throughout North and Latin America.

He graduated with honors as an industrial engineer and completed both an MBA and a M.Sc. in industrial and operations engineering at the University of Michigan.

Meguro belongs to three generations of Japanese immigrants in Mexico, melding his multicultural background with living and working in the United States and Latin America.
