Ash Shehata

Director, Payor Specialist and Connected Health
Internet Business Solutions Group

Ash Shehata is a director of the Cisco Internet Business Solutions Group (IBSG), responsible for the healthcare payor and financial services industry. IBSG works with many of the world's leading healthcare organizations and public-sector accounts to help them become more effective through business-process innovation and strategic technology deployment.

Shehata brings solid industry knowledge and broad experience to the organization. Prior to joining Cisco, he was vice president of Health Solutions for WellPoint, Inc., the largest health payor in the United States, accountable for one in nine Americans. He was also instrumental in the development of WellPoint's shared services organization, managing customer service technologies, e-business membership, and medical management systems.

Prior to WellPoint, he was COO of an international applications company, serving multinational clients and governments in North America, Latin America, Asia, and the Middle East.

A former consulting executive with Accenture and IBM Global Services, Shehata has had associations with a number of executives in key healthcare, government, and financial services accounts around the globe. Additionally, Shehata served as a hospital administrator at the University of Cincinnati Medical Center and was adjunct faculty at Xavier University.

Ash graduated from Xavier University with a bachelor's degree in psychology, post-graduate degrees in hospital and health administration, and a master's degree in business administration.

Cisco Internet Business Solutions Group (IBSG)