

Martin Stewart-Weeks

Director, Global Public Sector Practice,
Internet Business Solutions Group

Martin Stewart-Weeks is a director in the global public sector practice of the Cisco Internet Business Solutions Group (IBSG). He has more than 20 years of experience in organizational management and consulting in the corporate and public sectors, and with a wide range of not-for-profit organizations. In his work with the Cisco Internet Business Solutions Group (IBSG), Stewart-Weeks' focus is primarily on the public sector. He works at the senior-executive and political levels to help shape Internet business solutions and online strategies. He has been a key member of the global team developing a new e-government framework, "The Connected Republic", for IBSG's public sector work.

A consistent theme of Stewart-Weeks professional experience has been public policy and management. He has held senior policy, management, and advisory positions for ministers and government agencies at the federal and state government level in Australia. In the early 1980s, he held the position of Senior Private Secretary to a Federal Minister, and in the early '90s he was a consultant in the Office of Strategic Planning in The Cabinet Office in New South Wales.

In his consulting work, Stewart-Weeks specializes in strategy, policy analysis, facilitation, and market and social research. He holds a bachelor's degree (Hons) in English from the University of York, a graduate diploma in applied economics from Canberra University, and a master's degree in social science and policy from the University of New South Wales.
