

Code of Certification Ethics

Cisco and our employees have a long-standing commitment to doing business ethically and with social responsibility. Cisco's expectations of high ethical standards and anti-corruption policies extend to our partners, suppliers and vendors around the world. We believe sharing these high standards helps to support fair competition, maintain top quality products and services, promote cutting edge innovation, and protect the environment and human rights for everyone.

Achieving a Cisco certification is more than having specific technical knowledge. It is also an extension of our commitment to high standards. For these certifications to continue to represent valid advanced training and a valuable career investment for the candidates, we must work together to fight fraud, bribery, cheating, or inaccurate information related to training or testing.
