CONTROLLED PRODUCTS

Cisco products are controlled under the United States Export Administration Regulations and Wassannar Arrangement as telecommunication/networking equipment within the following classifications: 5A991, 5D991, 5A992, 5D992, 5A002* and 5D002*

*Note: Products classified under 5A002 and 5D002 are subject to additional distribution use and user restrictions. Please see Cisco's Encryption Quick Reference Guide.

While most Cisco products are subject to anti-terrorism controls some items contain cryptographic features designed to prevent unauthorized access to network management functions and user data.

To determine a given product's classification, please visit Cisco's Trade Tool. Please be advised that a cisco.com guest account is required. You may search by product number, sales order, purchase order and a number of other methods.

CONTROLLED TECHNOLOGIES

Cisco manages technology subject to the U.S. Export Administration Regulations (EAR) and the Wassenaar Arrangement. These controlled technologies may include items under US Export Control Classification Number (ECCN) 5E001 pertaining to Dynamic Adaptive Routing, Optical Switching, SS7, non-aggregated port speed data transfer rates exceeding 15Gbps; and US ECCN 5E002 cryptography.

Recipients of controlled technology are obliged to maintain adequate controls to prevent nationals from Country Groups D:1 or E of countries (listed at <http://www.access.gpo.gov/bis/ear/pdf/740spir.pdf>) from accessing Cisco information, subject to ECCN 5E001 (Dynamic Adaptive Routing, Optical Switching, SS7, non-aggregated port speed data transfer rates exceeding 15Gbps); or nationals outside the U.S. and Canada from accessing Cisco information, subject to ECCN 5E002 (cryptography) -- without first obtaining U.S. Government authorization. Notification to Cisco is required prior to placing nationals from Country Groups D:1 or E, at a Cisco site or on a project requiring collaboration with Cisco operations and/or employees where controlled technology will be accessed.

Defense Articles and Services

Defense articles, defense services and technical data subject to control under defense laws and regulations, (e.g. the International Traffic in Arms Regulations) may not be transferred to persons, whether located in the United States or abroad, without a valid license or agreement approved by the applicable government authority. For additional information regarding defense article and service controls, please visit <http://www.pmdtc.org/reference.htm>.

To request additional information on controlled technologies, please contact
