

Ayman Elgohary
General Manager – Cisco Egypt

Ayman Elgohary is the General Manager for Cisco in Egypt, appointed in 1st of October 2013. He is a corporate leader and a businessman with a successful track record in people management, executive relationships and operational excellence. He is also known for driving corporate strategy and transformational initiatives within the business environment, through his 18-years of experience in the ICT field covering the Middle East and Africa (MEA) region.

Ayman joined Cisco in 2003 starting his tenure as a Commercial Account Manager covering Egypt and Levant, where he grew the business three fold over a two year period. He was then promoted the Regional Sales Manager (RSM) acting as the Commercial leader across ten countries in North Africa and Levant (NAL). His role was then expanded to lead the Partner and Commercial Organization for Cisco in 22 countries across Egypt, North, West and Central Africa (ENWCA). At Cisco Ayman has received many awards - the one that he appreciates most being the accolade of “Best Commercial RSM in MEA” awarded in 2007 which reflects his successful track record in sales management and operational excellence.

Prior to Cisco, Ayman spent 8 years working with local Systems Integrators in Egypt and the UAE. He speaks 3-languages (Arabic, English and French) and he holds a Bachelor of Science Degree in Electrical Engineering and majored in Communications and Electronics from Ain Shams University in Cairo. He also has an MBA from Strathclyde Business School (SBS) in Scotland, one of the top 100 and leading business schools in the world.

Ayman is a member of numerous organizations and workgroups, including the American Chamber of Commerce in Egypt and its ICT Core Committee, working towards developing the ICT sector in Egypt.
