

ADAM GRENNAN

Country Manager, Ireland
Cisco International Ltd.

Adam Grennan was appointed Country Manager for Cisco in Ireland in March 2012. Adam is also a Director of Cisco Systems Interworking (Ireland) Ltd and a board member of Cisco UK and Ireland.

He previously held the role of Head of Technical Strategy for Cisco in Ireland where he led a team of engineers and architects whose key objective was to work with customers and partners and articulate how Cisco's architectures and solutions can be applied to drive business transformation.

This year marks Adam's 34th year in the IT and Communications industry. During that time he has also held various roles in some of the world's largest communications companies including Siemens Nixdorf, Cable and Wireless, Global One and Avaya before joining Cisco in 2005.

With his wealth of experience in communications technologies, Adam is a leading voice on such issues as the Internet of Everything, the ICT sector in Ireland, Cloud Computing, Data Security, Unified Communications and other Cisco related matters.

Adam holds an MSc in Enterprise Network Management from Sheffield Hallam University. He lives with his wife and four children in Dublin.
