

Cisco Bring Your Own Device (BYOD) Release 2.5—FIPS Certification Status

The following table depicts the certification status of the specific products and software versions that were verified in this BYOD 2.5 design guide. Since the design guide incorporates the latest versions of software and hardware, none of the products included are currently and fully certified, but as of July 2013, the publication date of this report, all but three products have already been submitted for certification posting or in progress. The three products that are not planned include version 7.5 of the Cisco 5508 and the Nexus 7000 Sup1. Both of these products will be certified in future software versions, but these specific software releases used in the design guide are not scheduled to go through certification. Instead, their next releases are already in planning for certification.

The only product that is not scheduled for certification is the Catalyst 6500 VSS4T. This product is not prioritized as needing certification at this point.

We publish this report as a guide for network designers to understand the certification posture of all the components of the BYOD 2.5 so you can make deployment and design decisions that meet your customers' specific certification requirements.
